Calculating the height of your rocket launch: It is always good to do a few practice runs with the calculations before you actually launch, however, if you choose to you can also launch your rockets and then do the calculations on the actual data Using the Sample Rocket Launch Data, and the Table of Tangents Chart on page 23 of your

Space Shuttle Launch Trajectory - I 40

Image: Shuttle launch as seen from a NASA aircraft Problem 1 - Use the parametric equations for $h(T)$ and $R(T)$ to determine the equation for the speed, S , of the Shuttle along its trajectory where $dS/dt = ((dh/dt)^2 + (dR/dt)^2)^{1/2}$ Problem 2 - Determine the formula for the magnitude of the acceleration of the launch speed and launch angle, and G the universal gravitational constant On combining these two equations, after setting $GM = gR^2$, where g is the standard acceleration of gravity at the earth's surface, one finds- $= + - \sim - []$ To find the highest point H above the earth's surface reached by the missile, we

Propulsion: Ball Launcher Grades 5-12

486 kilometers (302 miles) from the launch site If Fig 1 represented the Shepard's flight, the distance from the vertex to the bottom of the parabola is 1875 kilometers (1165 miles) The range from liftoff to splashdown is 486 kilometers (302 miles) The left side of the parabola represents the ascent period, while the right side

1 Range of Projectile Motion

(Ignore the height of the launch point) Solution In our expression for the range, the second term is constant Thus we need to maximize the first term It is achieved when $\sin(2\theta) = 1$ $2\theta = 90^\circ = 90 + 2\theta = 90 + 20^\circ = 55^\circ$ So s/he needs to throw a ball at an angle 55° to the horizontal(35° to the incline) The range with this projection angle is $R = v^2$

equation of reconstruction--ie, the equation for calculation of pedestrian launch velocity--is then obtained by inverting the equation for total throw distance This equation is, in the special case of a horizontal road, reduced to the so called Searle equation ([15][16]) The four methods of reconstruction are then discussed: the method

Mathematics and Model Rockets

A rocket can lift off from a launch pad only when it expels gas out of its engine The rocket pushes on the gas and the gas pushes on the rocket With rockets, the action is the expelling of gas out of the engine The reaction is the movement of the rocket in the opposite direction To launch of STS 121 The ascent phase begins at liftoff and ends at insertion into a circular or elliptical orbit around the Earth To reach the minimum altitude required to orbit the Earth, the space shuttle must accelerate from zero to 8,000 meters per second (almost 18,000 miles per hour) in eight and a half minutes It takes a very
